Dear Sir or Madam

I am a beauty specialist offering eyelash extension treatments. I have been approached by [Name] who is seeking this treatment.

They have disclosed a medical condition that you are treating. At this time, I cannot treat them without your consent to do so.

To inform your decision, I offer the following information as I will not assume that you know what they are, how they are applied and what products are used to treat.

Applying eyelash extensions is a relaxing treatment as the recipient lays flat on a beauty couch or reclined in a chair for the duration of their treatment.

I cleanse their natural lashes using a specially formulated lash cleanser and then dry them with tissues and a fan.

The eyelashes on their lower lash line are secured using eye pads or micropore tape to protect them. This prevents them from being drawn into the treatment. The adhesive of the pads or tapes are in contact with the skin under their eyes. Their eyes remain closed throughout the treatment.

I use fine pointed tweezers to isolate a suitable healthy adult eyelash that will host the eyelash extension. The tips of those tweezers rest gently on the pads or tapes.

A lash extension made of PBT plastic is carefully bonded to a natural lash between 0.3-0.5mm away from the lid line with a specially formulated adhesive that contains on average, over 85% cyanoacrylate. This may be repeated between 50 to 130 times per eye.

All the Safety Data Sheets of the products that I use are available on my Website at www.eliteeyelashextensions.co.uk/salon/what-is-a-reaction

If you believe that it is possible for [name] to have this treatment, I can only do so if your consent is in writing and your client must cover any costs that may be incurred for your service.

Yours sincerely

J Knight
